Structure Fulton, George W., House (TEX-3116)

S. Beach St. Cypress siding imitating masonry quoins, shell concrete foundation, reinforced with railroad rails, wall construction of stacked lumber or ties, bolted into place; three-bay front, three stories and basement, mansard roofs, turrets, and bracketed cornices, round-arched windows in entrance tower. Irregular plan. Victorian interior features marble, ebony, walnut and imported tile. The bathrooms and central heating system (over) are exceptional for this location and date. Built 1866 for G.W. Fulton, a cousin of Robert Fulton, who came to Texas in the early days of the Republic and married the daughter of Henry Smith, the first provisional governor. The town was named after Fulton. 2 ext. photos (1936); 2 data pages (1937). HABSI.

Card prepared June 1975.
